MISSING BANKSY SOLD FOR £750K

Slave Labour auctioned at members-only event

HARINGEY'S missing Banksy work was sold to a secret bidder for about £750,000 at an auction on Sunday night.

The sale of Slave Labour has been mired in controversy following accusations that it was removed illegally from its original home on the wall of the Poundland store, in Whymark Avenue, Wood Green, in February.

But despite protests and campaigns from art groups, residents, councillors and MPs across Haringey and beyond, the distinctive artwork went under the hammer last weekend.

It was sold at a swanky, members-only auction organised by the Sincura Group, at the London Film Museum, in Covent Garden.

The work, which had been restored since being removed from its original location, went to the highest of three bidders at a silent auction for more than £750,000.

Hornsey and Wood Green MP Lynne Featherstone had launched a last-ditch appeal to the owners of the piece to stop the sale.

But that failed, with Tony Baxter, of Sincura, issuing a statement before the sale justifying the group's decision to display and auction the work.

He said: "The Sincura Group do not condone any acts of wanton vandalism or other illegal activity. However, after carrying out extensive due diligence with regard to the work's provenance and ownership, we are entirely satisfied that the mural was salvaged legally."

"It is only through The Sincura Group's unique network that this coup was made possible."

"Everyone was trying to find the true story of the piece's whereabouts and we were the only company to do so."

"It should be noted that both Scotland Yard and the FBI have issued statements that there is no evidence of criminality involved in the removal of this illegally painted mural and therefore no case to answer."

"The Sincura Group are making no financial gain from displaying this piece of art."

Slave Labour, which shows a young boy crouched over a sewing machine making Union Jack bunting, was painted on the wall of the discount store in May of last year. It appeared just before the Queen's Diamond Jubilee.

It disappeared in February before reappearing for sale at an auction in Miami, in the US.

Following concerted pressure from Haringey Council, arts groups and residents, it was removed from sale at the last moment.

It had been expected to fetch more than $400,000 (£264,000).

The Sincura Group then revealed ahead of Sunday's sale that were the work not auctioned off on the night, it would be sold to a private collector in America.

Haringey councillor Alan Strickland, who was instrumental in the campaign to try and save the work, said: "It's just sad to see that a Miami auction house listened to public opinion, but London companies have ignored it."

Schools recognised for exams success

TWO Haringey schools are among 100 most improved primaries in the country.

Risley Avenue Primary and St Paul's and All Hallows' Infant and Junior School were among those listed in league tables for improvements between 2009 and 2012.

The Department for Education figures highlight those primaries which have done the most to improve pupils' performances in final year English and maths SATs exams.

Risley Avenue, in The Roundway, Tottenham, and St Paul's and All Hallows', in Park Lane, Northumberland Park, have both seen their percentage of pupils achieving level 4 in both subjects increasing every year since 2009.

Last year, 80 per cent of pupils at Risley Avenue achieved at least a level 4 in their English and maths exams, with 27 per cent claiming a level 5 pass in both subjects.

That mark was even higher at St Paul's and All Hallows', with 83 per cent of pupils achieving a level 4 pass in English and maths.

Headteacher Sharon Easton said: "The school has worked very hard to improve the curriculum we provide for our children, so it is fantastic to see that the progress we have made has been recognised nationally."

Risley Avenue head Robert Singh said: "To be recognised as one of the most improved schools in the country, in this our centenary year, is a fantastic achievement, which is due to the dedication and hard work of our pupils, their families and the staff here."

Beware bogus Green Deal salesmen

RESIDENTS have been warned to be on their guard after homes in Seven Sisters were targeted by bogus council representatives.

The callers claimed to be working on behalf of Haringey Council offering Green Deal assessments. Earlier this year the council received £150,000 from the Department for Energy and Climate Change to carry out 580 free energy efficiency assessments of homes and businesses in the borough.

These no-obligation assessments are made by appointment only and then any homes or businesses wishing to have energy improvement work carried out are pointed in the direction of Green Deal-approved firms.

The council warned that the bogus door-to-door salesmen were trying to get into people's homes on the premise of carrying out appointments and then pressing them to have energy efficiency works carried out.

Authorised Green Deal assessors have proper ID and only enter a home when invited.

Ryan is accused of behaving 'aggressively' at Labour AGM

But former MP refutes allegations of trying to influence elections at meeting

By Koos Couvée

koos.couvee@nlhnews.co.uk

'Nonsense': Former Enfield North MP Joan Ryan has hit back at allegations made in a letter of complaint against her FORMER Enfield North MP Joan Ryan has been accused of trying to determine the outcome of elections at a meeting of the Enfield Southgate Labour Party.

A number of senior party members have alleged that during the branch's annual meeting, which was held at West Grove Primary School, in Chase Road, Southgate, three weeks ago, Ms Ryan behaved in an intimidating manner towards fellow party members in an attempt to influence the voting process.

The Advertiser has learned that a formal complaint about the conduct of Ms Ryan, who is in the running as prospective parliamentary candidate in neighbouring Enfield North, has been made to the executive committee of the Enfield Southgate Labour Party by a number of branch members.

The letter of complaint, which has been seen by the Advertiser, accuses Ms Ryan of trying to influence the outcome of the meeting and of "aggressive", "intimidating" and "uncomradely" behaviour.

During the meeting, the elections for executive committee positions were postponed after concerns were raised over the eligibility of some members to vote.

A senior Enfield Southgate Labour Party member, who wished to remain anonymous, said: "What happened at the AGM was a strategic attempt to overthrow the incumbent executive committee.

"The selection panel, which decides who runs for the MP position, is appointed by the executive committee.

"It became very clear at the AGM that there was a game plan. The moment the electoral process ended, all the new members walked out, and so did Joan Ryan."

Other senior party members, including Jeff Rodin, who was leader of the Enfield Council Labour group until 2010, believe Ms Ryan is trying to gain support in the neighbouring constituency for when she runs in Enfield North.

Mr Rodin said: "I am reliably informed that at that meeting she was involved in active and at times aggressive support for a group of members who were seeking to replace some of the long-serving members of the Southgate Labour Party executive.

"I think that for her to be selected by the Labour Party would be a mistake because it would divide the party."

Ms Ryan hit back, saying: "The allegations levelled against me are complete nonsense."

"As a Southgate Labour Party member, the only person I went to the AGM with was my husband. I sat at the back and I never left my seat. I never shout in a meeting, so that is also untrue. The chair of the meeting made a ruling and decided to stop the meeting and I had no complaints about that."

FINALLY, the sun has come out – and it looks like it is here to stay.

After a mediocre, and sometimes downright miserable half-term holiday, schoolchildren have returned to their classrooms.

But toddlers and grandparents have been taking the chance to soak up the sunshine, playing football, eating ice cream and feeding the ducks at Forty Hall and in Enfield Town Park.

And the mercury is expected to continue to rise, with temperatures averaging 20C all the way through the weekend and into next week.

Twigg attacks free school policies during home visit

By Koos Couvee

koos.couvee@nlhnews.co.uk

FORMER Enfield Southgate MP Stephen Twigg highlighted the value of “gold standard” apprenticeships on a visit to educational institutions in the borough this week.

The Shadow Education Secretary, now MP for Liverpool West Derby, returned to his old stomping ground to meet students and staff at Chickenshed Theatre and Barnet and Southgate College on Monday morning.

Mr Twigg spoke to the Advertiser about free schools, apprenticeships and his childhood memories of the inclusive theatre during his visit.

Last week Education Secretary Michael Gove gave the nod to two more free schools opening in Enfield next year.

But Enfield-born Mr Twigg said that often these schools, independent of local authority control, are located in the wrong areas.

The Labour MP said: “The main thing that Mr Gove is getting wrong is that he should focus the free school policies on areas with a lack of school places.”

While visiting Barnet and Southgate College, the 46-year-old, who was Enfield Southgate MP from 1997 to 2005, was shown the advanced manufacturing and mechatronics equipment available to students.

Mr Twigg said there needed to be more focus on post-16 education.

He told the Advertiser: “While maths and English are important, the government should have a focus on post-16 and post-18 education apprenticeships and have a broader curriculum which retains a focus on vocational education.”

Making a point: Stephen Twigg visited Enfield on Monday

Traders shut up shop as they lose eviction battle

By Koos Couvée

koos.couvee@nlhnews.co.uk

A GROUP of traders in Edmonton Green who have been fighting an eviction battle with their landlord have started packing up their businesses.

The 22 retailers were served notice that their final day of trading at the units in South Mall would be June 1. But following a legal challenge they were granted a week's extension by In Shops, the market operator which rents out the spaces.

It was revealed in April that St Modwen, the property giant which owns the shopping centre, had agreed a temporary contract with In Shops and put the units on the market in January 2012 – but the traders were not informed officially until April 11 this year.

They are furious they were given just a month's notice to leave and that new businesses were allowed to move in as late as February, even though In Shops' deal with St Modwen had been terminated.

Seyit Aksu, who closed his Eat In Café on Saturday after only three months of trading, said: "We are seeking legal advice because we were kept in the dark about the situation In Shops was in. We have been pushed aside as two big companies have trod on us for their own financial gain."

"We spent a lot of money on setting up the businesses and it is very difficult for us to put a deposit down on new premises. We will have to start from scratch again."

Four retailers have found alternative premises in the shopping centre, but the other traders, some of whom have been at the site for nine years, have nowhere to go.

Joanna Ladzinska, who runs a baby clothing shop, said: "Fortunately, I am in a new place in the shopping centre but because of In Shops, all the money I have invested is gone. We are talking to lawyers about pursuing a compensation claim."

Plans are in the pipeline to rent half of the site to Lloyds TSB, which has been given permission by Enfield Council to establish a new branch.

A spokesman for In Shops said: "We will be vacating by June 25. The last of the traders will be vacating by this Sunday. The last day of trading is Friday." St Modwen was unavailable for comment as the Advertiser went to press.

Sevenfold increase in Right-to-Buy scheme

Number of tenants buying their council homes rockets

By Koos Couvée

koos.couvee@nlhnews.co.uk

ENFIELD has seen a significant rise in the number of tenants buying their homes from the council under the revived Right-to-Buy scheme.

Only eight tenants purchased their home from Enfield Council during 2011/12. But over the following 12-month period the number jumped to 56, with Enfield ranking fifth among all London boroughs for sales.

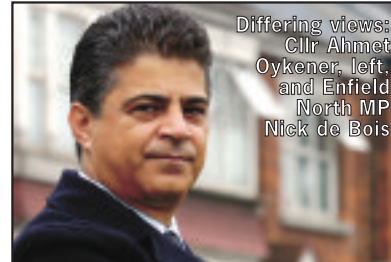

A revival of the flagship Conservative policy, which allows council tenants to buy their homes for a considerable discount, was announced by Chancellor George Osborne as part of his 2013/14 budget.

Under the new regulations, council tenants in London can receive a discount of up to £100,000 on the purchase price.

And they will only have had to be living in the property for three years, as opposed to five years previously, to qualify for the scheme.

Enfield North MP Nick de Bois welcomed the increase in sales.

He said: "Many people have a

Differing views:

desire to own their own home and this has been borne out by the amount of people showing an interest.

"The changes that this government has made to Right-to-Buy is that it has added further incentives to tenants by increasing the discount for people living in London and reducing the duration of tenancy required.

"Furthermore, whereas before the money raised by local authorities from sales could not be used for new social homes, this time around the money has to be ploughed back into the community for new affordable homes."

Ahmet Oyken, Enfield Council's cabinet member for housing, said: "I can't argue with people wanting to own their own home.

"What I am critical of is that if the government is so serious about people buying their own homes, local authorities should be able to retain 100 per cent of the revenue of the sales so we can build more social housing.

"At the moment we only retain around 70 per cent.

"People should be able to get on to the housing ladder, but we need to ensure we can replace the properties that we would lose under Right-to-Buy, so that we can ease the pressure on council waiting lists and have more family-size properties available."

Concerns over plans to put agency carers in sheltered housing

By Koos Couvée

koos.couvee@nlhnews.co.uk

ELDERLY residents with care needs who are living in sheltered accommodation have been told of plans to replace full-time staff employed by the council with agency staff.

Enfield Council is consulting residents on designing personalised care packages and replacing full-time carers with agency staff at Dean House, in Archers Drive, Enfield Highway, Newstead House, in Maldon Road, Edmonton, and Len Warren House, in St James Road, Edmonton.

Residents were told four weeks ago that a review had been carried out and the council thought that services did not have to be delivered by the local authority.

Deborah Fowcett, 53, of Albany Road, Enfield Wash, whose father David Keen, 86, lives in Dean House, criticised the council's move.

"They are taking away the extra care services and replacing these with agency care," she said. "This is going to affect my father and other residents, as staff are going to be there for shorter period of times and quality of care is often lacking.

Sheltered homes: Dean House, in Archers Drive, Enfield Highway

"My parents gave up a three-bedroom property for the care they would receive there and still being able to live independently. My dad has had serious trouble sleeping since he heard about the changes and a lot of residents are concerned.

"Surely they deserve to have a little calm and happiness at their age?"

The council says the move will mean that the 26 sheltered housing tenants with care needs are soon to have a greater degree of control over how those needs are met.

Don McGowan, cabinet member for adult services, care and health, said: "Traditionally, care needs have been met by an in-house domiciliary care service, but now tenants are being invited to contribute to the design of their own care.

"Every person is assessed so that an appropriate care plan can be made. The new arrangements align care packages in the sheltered blocks to those of people living in their own homes with similar needs, increasing equality across Enfield.

"The new arrangement encourages people to think about the services they need with their own personal budget."

Conservative councillor and shadow member for adult social services Denise Headley said: "While we understand the concerns of the community with regards to continuity of care, we have to understand that these services are given to people for free and the council has to provide value for money.

"You have to be realistic about the cost of care in this country and it simply cannot be sustained at current levels, which is a huge cost to the public purse."

Poorer areas face unhealthy future

THE levels of health inequality in Enfield are shocking, but it is not something new. This paper has reported on these issues time and time again.

Those living in the leafy parts of the borough – Southgate and Winchmore Hill, for example – are doing pretty well for themselves when it comes to rates of strokes and heart disease.

The picture is not so rosy in the eastern corridor of Enfield, where people who live in some of the most deprived areas of the country make much more use of emergency departments than those only a few miles away.

You could say, well, at least they are getting to keep their hospital nearby in Edmonton.

But as we have also highlighted previously, and has made national news again this week, patients are languishing for longer and longer in A&E departments rather than getting the specialist care the NHS says it is aiming to get patients to receive, so how are we going to cope when Chase Farm's A&E department is closed in November?

More needs to be done to bring the unhealthy parts of the boroughs in line with the wealthier side of Enfield.

We already know that life expectancy rates vary by up to 13 years between some of the poorest wards such as Upper Edmonton and the more affluent Highlands area.

The council is planning a health conference in Edmonton next month in conjunction with the National Health Service to educate residents – but it is a shame the government has seen fit to give the borough less than it deserves when it comes to health funding.

These latest figures clearly show that deprivation equals poor health.

And with the economy in the doldrums, things in Edmonton could look gloomy health-wise for some years to come.

This is harming fight against benefit fraud

I READ with interest the article on tackling illegal subletting of council homes in Enfield (Advertiser, May 1).

Like most people, I would welcome a crackdown on all types of benefit fraud and have to ask myself how serious is my borough about tackling this issue?

At a time when the burden on the benefit system is increasing because of redundancies, unemployment and the changes to the benefit system, it seems that the number of benefit fraud investigators in our borough has decreased.

I get increasingly angry at seeing the soft sentences passed by the courts on people who steal benefits, derisory amounts of community service, suspended sentences etc.

So, what chance of tackling these issues with any determination?

In a recent Freedom of Information request, I was informed the number of benefit fraud investigators in the borough had reduced by half in the past four years, giving us just over five staff.

Surely, as the burden on the system grows and the number of fraudulent claims being made increase, this should be one department where cuts should not be made?

Healthcare is looking sickly

THE government has told us that changes in hospital provision, such as having fewer accident and emergency departments, will create a closer relationship with our GPs.

Warden Lodge, in Crossbrook Street, Cheshunt, is taking part in a pilot scheme, which will be expanded to all other surgeries, if successful.

It amounts to your illness being initially diagnosed over the phone by a third party, who will consider what is wrong with you.

A nurse may be asked to ring you back instead of a doctor, or a doctor may call you in a couple of hours or later to diagnose your illness and whether you need to visit the surgery or not. The return call will be paid for by the NHS.

A closer relationship with our GP?

I don't think so.

It's plain batty

THE site of the proposed George Spicer school extension in Enfield is frequented by bats.

Under the law, bats are a protected species. So any developer intending to carry out work in an area known to be frequented by bats has a duty to carry out a full survey to establish where the bats roost and feed.

A Freedom of Information request put to Enfield Council has produced no evidence the required survey has been carried out.

The bats at the proposed school site have been feeding among the flowering cherry trees which are among a number due to be removed to make way for a car park.

John Hall, Chairman, Friends of Enfield Playing Fields

Burrowes is out of touch

MP DAVID Burrowes' peremptory response to a 17-year-old schoolgirl (Advertiser, May 22), informed comments about his voting record and his stance in voting against the gay marriage bill is hardly engaging meaningfully in a discourse on the subject and shows disregard to a young person.

The Enfield Southgate Tory MP's support for "traditional marriage" is interesting as the institution of marriage is a relatively recent phenomenon, only being formally recognised by protestant churches in the 17th century.

And the institution could be argued to be somewhat patriarchal with its emphasis on titles/inheritance/male surnames etc.

Given the increase in divorce rates, surely he should be trying to garner the gay vote to support the institution of marriage, with all its dubious historical antecedents?

Anti-gay marriage:
MP David Burrowes

I wonder if Mr Burrowes was also a supporter of the spiteful section 28, under the Thatcher government, which would have made Victoria Munroe's life as a A-level student in school difficult not so long ago and would have banned her from speaking out for her beliefs and sexual orientation.

Get over yourself, Mr Burrowes, and join the 21st century.

Council missed planning boat

I WAS slightly surprised by your article (Advertiser, May 22) about the council's response to the government turning down Enfield's application to be exempt from new policies making it easier to convert offices into homes.

What Councillor Del Goddard failed to mention was the fact applications from 17 boroughs to be exempt were approved by the government – and these included Labour and Conservative-controlled boroughs.

What is clearly evident is that the council and, more specifically, Mr Goddard's department, didn't submit a strong and compelling enough case to warrant the government granting Enfield an exemption.

What Mr Goddard did not admit is that, in reality, the government allowed local authorities, such as Enfield, who had concerns, the chance to be exempt from this policy and that Enfield's council blew that opportunity.

Councillor Joanne Laban

Not only way to cut obesity

RE: London Assembly member Joanne McCartney calling on more people to walk to school and their workplace (Advertiser, May 22).

How does she think that children will be encouraged to walk to school to tackle obesity when they are getting free bus rides?

She also goes on to say in her story that "walking is free" etc.

Well, so are bus fares for children and pensioners, for that matter, of whom I am one. I do, however, walk more than I use the bus.

I cannot see Ms McCartney's plan being very successful under the present criteria.

Walking on its own is not enough to tackle obesity. It is about eating the correct foods – and not eating too much of it.

Less doom and gloom, please

I WAS very disappointed with your reporting of the Grovelands Park centenary celebrations (Advertiser, May 22).

What must be one of the biggest community events in the borough of Enfield for quite a few years, only made pages 22 and 23 of your paper.

Instead, the front page was more gloom and doom, referring to a surge in rent relief claims.

Why couldn't we have had something positive and uplifting for a change and celebrate all the wonderful and talented people, both young and old, who volunteered or performed during the weekend?

No love for MP

HAVING read the letters in the Advertiser (May 22), I must say as a former Labour voter I couldn't vote for them again.

When I needed help from my MP, Andy Love, was as useful as a chocolate teapot and I am not sure whom I will vote for in the next election.

Continued closure of level crossing is unfair on residents

RE: Steven Knowles letter "What's the gate's fate?" (Advertiser, May 29).

Had he lived on the Lincoln Road side of the level crossing about which he writes, he would have experienced the common courtesy of at least two letters from me.

I sent these to 1,200 households in my own ward of Southbury, on the very topic of the unilateral decision to close the level crossing for an overextended period of time.

He would then also have had the opportunity for direct dialogue of the kind I have since conducted with many of my constituents.

I undertook this precisely because the people who live in the area do matter.

This is in stark contrast to Network Rail, which, following some necessary repair work at the turn of the year, seized the opportunity to implement a semi-permanent closure of the level crossing.

The decision was taken without any reference back to the council and it showed total disregard to the people most affected.

It may well be that Network Rail has legal rights on its side and it may well be that its future plans do involve a complete closure – a possibility which has already generated a mixed series of views. But that misses the point and blame is actually not the game here.

In recent months, the council has been in extensive dialogue with Network Rail to establish precisely the intention and related timings so as to secure a more extensive range of resident opinion, with full and proper consultation funded by Network Rail in conjunction with the council.

Furthermore, in order to deal with all the various implications of a planned closure, the council is working with Network Rail to develop a range of mitigation measures, including advanced signage, proper road traffic realignment and, above all, finding a realistic way of implementing safe and continued pedestrian access, maintenance of which has been a universal demand from local residents.

As part of these negotiations, Network Rail had agreed to temporarily reopen the crossing in early May at traditional weekday hours, pending a belatedly full and proper analysis of the effects of any future permanent closure.

Sadly, at the time of writing, this has still not been actioned.

This is disappointing and further fuels our concerns on behalf of residents that their needs and opinions are still being ignored by those responsible for the level crossing itself.

The council and local councillors, however, are in constant dialogue with Network Rail to ensure that fair and proper process is pursued, and that a broadly satisfactory outcome can be achieved
Councillor Derek Levy
Southbury ward

Failed by school admissions service

I AM writing to voice my serious concerns over Enfield Council schools admissions service's treatment of my daughter, who is due to start primary school reception classes this year.

She was not accepted into any of the six schools that we applied for in our local area. The furthest school was 1.4 miles away and all the rest a mile and under.

We were instead offered a place in a school rated "inadequate" by Ofsted, which is too far away and will make the school and nursery drop-off (for our younger son) a logistical nightmare.

The council talks about giving choices to parents in their children's education, but the only choices we now have are to send our daughter to a failing school we do not wish her to attend, to send her to a private, fee-paying school, or to home-school her.

We face the very real prospect of our daughter not having a suitable school to go to in September.

In our dealings with the admissions service, it has shown no compassion or understanding towards our situation and would rather have us accept its reasons of catchment area, which plays the postcode lottery with our children's education.

My child, like every other, has the right to a good education in a local school and I will continue to have my voice and my children's heard and work towards securing a place in one of our chosen schools.

I understand that the admissions service has a difficult job, but the way we have been treated is clearly unacceptable.

Preparing for a child's first day at school is supposed to be a happy time, but we have been cheated of this experience by a system that doesn't care about the losers in the application process, like our daughter.

Council handed £250k to get kids in shape

By Ruth McKee

ruth.mckee@nlhnews.co.uk

CHILDREN throughout the borough will soon be running, kicking and jumping for joy after council chiefs landed £250,000 to get Enfield moving.

The National Lottery grant will be earmarked to keep the 2012 Olympic legacy alive, helping to get the borough's children active – and also tackling childhood obesity.

In 2010/11, Enfield had the highest rate of obesity in reception-age children of any London borough, with 14.6 per cent of youngsters classed as obese when they were first measured and weighed at the age of four.

Unless something is done to help these kids lose weight, they could be storing up a host of health problems for the future.

The money will fund a raft of projects aimed at helping parents make healthy choices for their families.

The money will also be used to fund a scheme for doctors, schools and youth workers to point overweight youngsters in the direction of fun activities that will raise their pulses.

Enfield Council's cabinet member for culture and leisure Bambos Charalambous said he was determined to help the borough slim down.

"We are committed to getting PE firmly back on the curriculum," he explained.

"Our recent public health report showed that our young people spend significantly more time than the national average on high-quality physical education, which is something we are keen to encourage.

"This very welcome injection of Lottery money follows the theme of investing in getting our young people fit and healthy by targeting those who most need it – children and young people who suffer deprivation, those who need extra help to get fit and healthy and those with disabilities.

"This money is fantastic news and I look forward to seeing some of the projects for myself."

COUNCIL chiefs are consulting on plans that would see a 20mph zone across an area covering Palmers Green and Winchmore Hill.

Enfield Green Party members have been campaigning for a lower speed limit on the roads between Hoppers Road and Green Lanes.

And a petition with 700 signatures was handed to the council last year.

Residents have until June 14 to comment on the proposals, which would see a range of traffic calming measures, including flat speed bumps, known as cushions and tables, installed.

Although the Green Party is pleased Enfield Council is proposing a new 20mph zone, it would prefer to see other traffic calming measures put in place.

Douglas Coker, from the Enfield Greens, said: "We are very pleased that the council is proposing to implement the 20mph zone. It has reacted very positively."

"But we find that speed bumps can create a lot of vibrations and people driving over them can

Boost for 20mph campaigners as plans go out to consultation experience quite a bump, so we would prefer them to use sinusoidal bumps.

"These bumps are very gradual and run very smoothly. If you go too fast over them, they will send the car flying up and that's how you know you are going too quickly. We would prefer the council to use these."

The Greens have been campaigning to reduce the speed limit in the area in a bid to improve road safety and as part of its manifesto the Labour group pledged to enforce 20mph zones near schools.

"We want these roads to be handed back to the residents," added Mr Coker. "It will improve things for cyclists and allow children to play more safely."

But Winchmore Hill ward councillor Martin Prescott said he did not think implementing a 20mph zone would improve road safety.

"We don't mind the zone being implemented near schools," he said. "I think 30mph is fine as long as it is policed properly, and there is a lot of evidence to say that 20mph doesn't make things safer."

Go to www.enfield.gov.uk to take part in the consultation.

Teenager hurt as five flee from house blaze

A TEENAGER was taken to hospital after a fire broke out at his home on Monday morning.

A man, a woman and three children escaped from the blaze in the end-of-terrace house in Lovell Road, Enfield, shortly before 10.30am.

Two engines were sent from Enfield fire station and ten firefighters tackled the blaze, bringing it under control within 45 minutes.

One of the children, a teenage boy, was given oxygen by firefighters before paramedics treated him for cuts, bruises and smoke inhalation and took him to hospital.

A large part of the first floor of the house was damaged in the blaze. The cause of the fire is being investigated.

Nursery kids are learning how to cross roads safely

NURSERY children will be able to cross the road in the comfort of their classroom courtesy of a new training aid which is being unveiled next week. The Street Feet kits will see road safety officers recreating a scene to show youngsters the basics of how to cross a road. High visibility tabards, school crossing patrol signs, traffic lights and roll-up pavements and roads will all be included in the kit, which is being supplied by Enfield Council.

Children aged three and four will be able to cross the road as many times as they want, without being put in danger. Chris Bond, cabinet member for environment, said: "We are absolutely committed to reducing accidents and protecting school pupils from danger. "Teaching very young children the basics of road safety means they will know to take care and look out for traffic when they are crossing the road." "The younger we teach children this crucial skill, the better for all concerned," he added. The kits will have their first airing at St Andrew's School Nursery, in Churchbury Lane, Enfield, on Thursday June 13. The council is also teaming up with road safety charity Brake to organise a walking bus event the previous day. It will be the first time more than one school has taken part in a walking bus in Enfield, as 120 primary school children march through Enfield Town to raise awareness of road safety and the benefits of walking. The Giant Walking Bus event will see children, with teachers and parents, go from Enfield Library, in Church Street, to the Dugdale Centre, in London Road. Pupils will receive a goody bag, a briefing on why the event was organised and the aims of the walk. It is hoped the event will encourage more people to get out of their cars and use different forms of transport.

Getting in the swim of things

BUDDING swimmers were given a masterclass by six times world champion Mark Foster last week. The Mark Foster Academy joined forces with the team at Southbury Leisure Centre, in Southbury Road, Enfield, for an intensive training day aimed at getting the best out of aspiring swimming stars. As well as Foster, who won four freestyle and two butterfly gold medals at the world short course championships between 1993 and 2004 and a host of gold, silver and bronze medals at world and European championships and Commonwealth Games, Katy Sexton, the 2003 world 200 metres backstroke champion, was on hand to offer advice on how the youngsters could improve. The duo focused on speed, landing techniques, flexibility, core training and race preparation. The one-day swimming camp on Tuesday attracted more than 40 youngsters, who went through a combination of water training, land-based and mindset training and the mental preparation needed to become a champion.

Private companies are very real threat to the future of NHS services

THE first cold blast of free market competition in the health service has hit us – and it could be a further dagger to the heart of Chase Farm Hospital.

A cluster of companies, including Specsavers, Scrivens and Inhealth, have received the go-ahead from the government to bombard everyone over the age of 55 with hearing loss, but without a hearing aid, with offers of free NHS digital hearing aids.

“What’s wrong with that?” I hear you ask.

Well, at Chase Farm we have the finest team of degree qualified audiologists looking after some 23,000 registered patients, seeing around 700 new patients a month and another 400 a month at their walk-in clinic, which is open four days a week for any adjustments and advice.

To accommodate the entry of private competition, the government has lowered the audiology qualification level to that of hearing aid dispenser – and there’s no sign of an aftercare monitoring system being in place.

Once you have an NHS hearing test with one of these companies, there is nothing to stop them inducing people to go private and pay anything up to £3,000 for a different product.

Consider what happens if Specsavers, Scrivens and Inhealth receive the bulk of GP hearing aid referrals from the over-55s.

Firstly, the Chase Farm audiology unit will cease to be viable. Already in merger talks with the Royal Free Hospital, Chase Farm has to show it is profitable before getting the foundation status needed for its survival.

An unprofitable audiology unit will be a candidate for closure.

Secondly, the Enfield Clinical Commissioning Group, which finances the cost of NHS hearing aids, admits that if the private companies create more demand than they budgeted for, it will have a knock-on effect for their own finances already in deficit.

So, they will make more cuts in other local health services to increase the profits of private companies.

That’s the new Cameron-Lansley-Hunt health service for you.

A view from Westminster

Quintessentially English manner is the best way to respond to a tragedy

THE brutal killing of Drummer Lee Rigby has shocked the entire country. That such an appalling act could be committed against a member of our armed forces on the streets of Britain has left people feeling a whole range of emotions.

Deep sympathy for his family and friends and frustration that it could have happened at all. These feelings are completely natural and, as his death happened just a week ago at the time of writing, they are still raw.

I, therefore, felt that the Prime Minister’s calm rejection outside Downing Street of any kind of knee-jerk reaction was very welcome indeed.

The days and weeks after a national trauma is no time to be debating policies that may or may not have prevented such a tragic event.

What has been heartening is the way the public have shown their sympathy for Drummer Rigby and his family through their support for the armed forces charity, Help For Heroes.

Its website has been almost overwhelmed by people logging on to make donations and buy T-shirts – inspired by the fact that Drummer Rigby was wearing one when he was killed.

Buying and wearing Help For Heroes T-shirts is a rather calm, quiet and very English way of people expressing their solidarity with Drummer Rigby – and indeed all our armed forces.

It is in stark contrast to the marches and protests held by the likes of the English Defence League and the British National Party.

They do not represent ordinary, decent English folk any more than Islamist terrorists represent ordinary, decent Muslims.

When the time is right in the months ahead, the country, media and political class will reflect on the tragedy in Woolwich and, quite rightly, debate how we should respond.

But in the meantime, I think David Cameron was right when he said: “One of the best ways to defeat terrorism is to go about our normal lives, and that is what we shall do.”

Housing benefits cheat had £50,000-a-year job

By Kim Inam

kim.inam@nlhnews.co.uk

A MAN has been jailed for claiming housing benefits while in a £50,000-per-year job.

Kouadio Williams had pleaded not guilty to charges of failing to inform Enfield Council about a change in his circumstances as he accepted more than £32,000 from the state between July 2007 and May 2011.

Williams, of Charlton Road, Edmonton, was sentenced at Wood Green Crown Court last month to eight months behind bars.

The deception was uncovered after the council's counter-fraud team received information proving that Williams owned a flat in the Milton Keynes area which was being rented out at £650 a month.

He was caught living on benefits while also working for several employers, one with an annual wage of £50,000.

Andrew Stafford, Enfield's cabinet member for finance and property, said: "This fraud was committed not because of desperation, but out of sheer greed."

"Williams was in receipt of an income many people could only dream about, but still he felt the need to claim benefits.

"This is shameful and it is absolutely right the court should jail him for this disgraceful crime. We always prosecute benefit fraudsters to the full extent of the law and we will do everything we can to seize any assets that Williams has if we can to recoup our money."

Housing investigation officers recovered the property on which Williams claimed benefit and it was returned to housing association L&Q, which has since rehoused a tenant from the waiting list.

Bob Green

A steam day out to the seaside.

Passengers choosing to stay on board will have chance to explore Skegness, with its traditional seaside attractions – clock tower, seal sanctuary, pier, vast sandy beach with donkey rides and sticks of rock – before our steam train heads home.

Premier Dining includes full English breakfast and a four course dinner silver served at your seat.

Theo's helping to find jobs for girls

Employers and training firms taking part in fair

By Kim Inam

kim.inam@nlhnews.co.uk

WOMEN are being offered a helping hand to find a job.

Theo Lewis, organiser of tomorrow's North London Women's Jobs Fair, acknowledged that there are few jobs available.

But she said her event should inform mature women about how to improve their job prospects, which may include considering self-employment or starting a business from home.

Visitors to the fair at the Dugdale Centre, in London Road, Enfield Town, will be able to tour 22 stalls which include employers, training centres and help with producing a CV, as well as information about setting up a business.

Single mother-of-two Theo, who is studying for a law degree with the Open University and setting up her own business, told the Advertiser that mature women felt there were no jobs for them.

She said: "People know there are hardly any jobs out there. I tried to get more direct employers but they are all downsizing. But the few jobs that are there, we have to make sure that we have the right expertise, skills and training."

"There are a handful of people recruiting, but come along and find out what else you need to do to improve your chances of getting a job."

The Ministry of Defence, Avantis, Caremark, Enfield Council and JobCentre Plus will have stalls at the event, which is sponsored by the Enfield Gazette & Advertiser.

The 43-year-old added: "I've had so much support from women in setting this up. They understand what I'm trying to do and have offered to help."

"I just want to tell people that if you want to do something, Enfield has all the opportunities that can help."

Positive outlook: Theo Lewis is staging a jobs fair to help women find work and training

THE FUTURE OF LONDON FIRE BRIGADE

London Fire and Emergency Planning Authority is consulting on its Draft Fifth London Safety Plan. You have until 17 June to give us your views.

The plan sets out how the fire and rescue service could be delivered over the next few years. These proposals also involve the closure of 12 fire stations, the removal of 18 fire engines, the redeployment of four fire engines and a reduction in the number of firefighter posts of 520.

Cyclists on the way to Brighton in memory of tragic baby

ANNE-MARIE SANDERSON

By Mary McConnell

mary.mcconnell@nlhnews.co.uk

THREE members of the same family are taking part in a bike ride later this month to raise money in memory of a friend's baby who died when she was just three days old.

Geoff Pridmore, his daughter Rachel and her cousin Emily Pridmore will all be cycling 54 miles from London to Brighton on June 16 to raise money for the British Heart Foundation.

They are members of a team of eight cyclists who will be raising money in honour of Alana Sophia New, the daughter of Rachel's friend Paula.

Alana died six years ago after she was born with only half a heart.

Rachel, 30, has done the ride on three previous occasions, but this year she has roped her dad into the fundraiser for the first time.

Geoff, 59, who runs GP Commercials Ltd garage, in Stonehill Business Park, Blackwood Avenue, Edmonton, has been training hard, along with Rachel and Emily, to ensure that he is fit enough to complete the challenge.

The family, from Harlow in Essex, have been out cycling together to prepare for the ride, which will start in Clapham in south-west London and finish on the sea front in Brighton.

"I am hoping to do it in under four hours," said Rachel. "We went out recently and did 40 miles in two-and-a-half hours, so we should be okay."

"I am quite confident, although the first 25 miles are pretty hilly and the last hill is pretty monstrous. My dad is going to be alright. He rides from home to

Family affair: Rachel Kilbey, her father Geoff Pridmore and her cousin Emily Pridmore are getting ready to cycle from London to Brighton Edmonton once a week at least.

"The only big issue for us is rain. I've done it three times and there was a year in between when I didn't do because I was pregnant and the rain was really bad. Hopefully, it will be okay this year."

Six-hour gridlock on the M25 after lorries collide

DRIVERS had to endure hours of delays during Monday morning's rush hour after rubble was spilt across the M25.

Two lorries travelling clockwise on the motorway between Potters Bar and Enfield collided at 8.30am, causing miles of tailbacks as two lanes were closed for almost six hours.

Police and paramedics attended the scene, where roadworks are taking place and a 50mph speed limit is in operation.

One of the lorries shed its load and one of the drivers was taken to hospital suffering from leg injuries.

The lanes reopened at 2.20pm after the road had been cleared.

Horror attack inspires pals to set up fundraiser

ANNE-MARIE SANDERSON

Helping hands: John Dumbleton and Lucy Mulqueen are organising the fundraiser

A fete for Heroes

By Mary McConnell

mary.mcconnell@nlhnews.co.uk

A YOUNG woman was so moved by the horrifying death of Drummer Lee Rigby on the streets of Woolwich that she decided to organise an event in aid of Help For Heroes.

Lucy Mulqueen, 24, from Enfield, is hoping the event next month will pay tribute to the young soldier who died two weeks ago.

A fete on July 6, which will be held at Cheshunt Country Club, in Theobalds Lane, Cheshunt, will also be raising money for Macmillan Cancer Support.

Lucy told the Advertiser: "At first it was just going to be for Macmillan. We all know someone who has been affected by cancer. My dad died of cancer in 2009 and so many other people have been affected as well. The Macmillan nurses do a wonderful job."

"Then when Lee Rigby was killed we thought we wanted to show our support for Help For Heroes."

Drummer Rigby was wearing one of the charity's T-shirts when he was stabbed to death and since then Help For Heroes has reported a wave of support through donations and merchandise purchases which at times has crashed its website.

During the day there will be a bouncy castle, a football competition, a friendly tug-of-war event, face-painting and much more. Entry is free.

Tickets for the evening event will be £25 and there will be a host of acts, including a laser robot, fire dancers and breathers and a music performer called Miss Chance.

Lucy, who is organising the day with her cousin John Dumbleton, is hoping that the event will raise plenty of money for her chosen charities.

"I organised a similar event in October and we raised £3,000 for Meningitis UK," she added. "We hope this will be even bigger. Hopefully, loads of people will come. It is for a good cause."

To book tickets for the evening, call Lucy on 07943 035 001.

Tickling the ivories

Behind The Candelabra (15)
LIBERACE always bowed down at the altar of excess.

"Too much of a good thing is wonderful," he famously proclaimed. No doubt the flamboyant entertainer would have approved of the bouffant hairstyles, outlandish fashions and gaudy decor – referred to as "palatial kitsch" – festooning Steven Soderbergh's handsome biopic.

Based on the autobiography of Liberace's lover Scott Thorson, Behind The Candelabra exposes the tormented showman behind the fur-lined and sequin-bedecked myth.

Soderbergh's film traces the men's relationship from a fortuitous first meeting in 1977 to Liberace's death bed in 1987, when the entertainer attempted to keep his HIV status secret from fans and the gutter press.

Richard LaGravenese's script is peppered with tart one-liners, gifted largely to Michael Douglas as the fleet-fingered pianist.

It's a tour de force portrayal, far removed from the actor's Oscar-winning skullduggery as Gordon Gecko in Wall Street, that would be a shoo-in for an Oscar nomination had the film not been conceived for US cable television.

The film opens in a gay bar where Thorson (Matt Damon) meets choreographer Bob Black (Scott Bakula), who takes Scott to Las Vegas to enjoy a sold-out performance by Liberace.

At Bob's insistence, Scott abandons rural Wisconsin for the bright lights of the big city, where he is taken under Liberace's wing.

The relationship deepens and Liberace incorporates Scott into his act as on-stage chauffeur and assistant.

The pressures of fame weigh heavily on Scott and the relationship flounders.

The glitz and glamour are intoxicating and Soderbergh's film swishes tantalisingly close to Liberace's favourite and over-used superlative: "Fabulous!"

FAMILY ANNOUNCEMENTS

Farm's first festival set for rousing finale from bands

ANNE-MARIE SANDERSON

By Mary McConnell

mary.mcconnell@nlhnews.co.uk

FAMILIES are being invited to the first Forty Hall Farm Festival for a day of "music and peace".

The farm is being turned into a festival venue on Saturday June 15, hosting a range of musical acts, fancy dress, cake competitions, Indian head massage, a talent competition and much more – all in aid of local charities.

The festival follows on from the success of the Queen's Diamond Jubilee party staged at the farm, in Forty Hill, Enfield, last year.

However, this time the itinerary will be more music-focused in the evening.

The festival is being organised by Enfield resident Leon Wilkinson along with Jill Simpson, the owner of The Village Store, in Forty Hill.

Jill said: "There is a load going on. During the day people can bring a picnic lunch and there are loads of activities.

"Then in the evening there is hot and cold food and all the bands.

"It was brilliant last year. There were about 900 people.

"We are hoping this will be the first of many successful festivals.

"There are lots of local charities which we are raising money for – Enfield Mental Health Users' Group, One-to-One Enfield and The Scratching Post, which is a charity for abandoned cats.

Just the ticket: Forty Hall Farm Festival organisers Jill Simpson and Leon Wilkinson

"This is going to be a great event for the community to get together and we've got some brilliant bands in the evening."

Coldplay tribute band Coldplace, Hollywood Assassins and The Red

Indians are among those playing.

The event is scheduled to start at noon and finish at 11pm.

Tickets are £8 for the day or £7 for the evening, from 5pm onwards.

They can be bought from Jill at

The Village Wholefood Store.

The organisers are looking for local business to sponsor the event as well as for donations of tables and chairs. Anyone who can help is should call Leon on 07590 681 945.

Principal's Shakespeare has hints of The Archers, Motown and Benidorm

By Mary McConnell

mary.mcconnell@nlhnews.co.uk

THE Principal Theatre Company will be bringing the Bard to Enfield again this summer with alfresco performances of two of Shakespeare's plays.

The company is will be performing Shakespeare's shortest play, The Comedy Of Errors, as well as his longest – Hamlet.

A lot of tweaking and expert cutting by director Paul Gladwin means that the running time of both will be two-and-a-quarter hours.

As usual the plays will be staged in the gardens at Capel Manor, Old Ashmoleans Rugby Club, in Southgate, and at Coram's Fields in Bloomsbury, central London.

"Hamlet is a hard one to do, timing-wise," explained Paul. "As we are doing these plays outside we really couldn't let people sit out in the British weather for four-and-a-half hours

"The opening scene is a couple of blokes coming out with torches saying how cold it is.

"We've had to think of how we are going to do this when it is not going to be massively dark and without a

Rehearsal: Actors preparing for The Comedy Of Errors and, below right, director Paul Gladwin, who will also play Claudius in his version of Hamlet grave. We have had to find ingenious ways of doing things."

Instead of Denmark, Paul's Hamlet will be set among the rural aristocracy. And there won't be a king – instead there will be a lord of the manor and rather than soldiers there will be gamekeepers and servants.

"We have done it like the radio show The Archers," said Paul. "So the actors are all wearing tweed and it is set in this upper-class world.

"We have a very talented young actor called David Mildon playing Hamlet. I knew as soon as I saw him I wanted him to be Hamlet. It's very difficult to audition the role of Hamlet. You have to know who you want to cast in it."

In contrast, The Comedy Of Errors is set on a Mediterranean island with a Motown-themed party. Paul said he got the idea after watching an episode of ITV sitcom Benidorm.

"The Comedy Of Errors is set on a fictional Greek island – it is a foreign land," he said. "But I thought it should be somewhere in the Med.

"Even though there is a load of Motown music, it is not set in the 1960s, it's modern.

"I first directed The Comedy Of Errors about three years ago, at a drama school, and I thought this would be a great play to do with really funny actors. It is a big knockabout farce."

Performances start on June 13 at Capel Manor Gardens, in Bullsmoor Lane, Enfield, before moving on to Old Ashmoleans Rugby Club, in The Bourne, Southgate, on July 3.

On July 12, the company will move to Coram's Fields, in Guilford Street, Bloomsbury.

Customers queuing round block for taste of Jamaica

Restaurant News

TWO weeks ago young entrepreneur Shamaine Bruce-Green started up her Caribbean food business – and already the 23-year-old is doing a roaring trade.

Despite her youth, Shamaine has found a gap in the market and plugged it. Her mobile food van – A Taste of Passion, which operates in the north mall at Edmonton Green shopping centre – offers authentic, pleasing and quick food to punters keen for a taste of Jamaica.

Shoppers are already finding it hard to resist the gorgeous smell of barbecued jerk chicken that wafts across the newly refurbished mall and Shamaine regularly has people queuing round the block.

The food is prepared courtesy of her son's grandmother Imogene Findlayson.

The Jamaican-born cook brings her huge knowledge of Caribbean cooking to prepare popular dishes which vary from day to day.

On Fridays and Saturdays, it's always jerk chicken. During the rest of the week it can be stew beef or curry goat. A Taste of Passion also serves up Caribbean patties, with a secret blend of spices.

"Imogene has all these great recipes," explained Shamaine. "She loves cooking and was recently made redundant so it worked out well."

"It looks easy, but even if I try it it is not the same. She adds her own touch which makes it really special."

Tasty: Shamaine Bruce-Green, serving, and Imogene Findlayson, inset, have already made A Taste of Passion a popular destination

"We never expected it to be this busy. The day we opened there were queues round the block and we had to get barriers in. You couldn't even get into the 99p store."

Shamaine hopes that her beautiful Caribbean cuisine will attract a range of people from across Edmonton.

"I want it to be for all races, not just Caribbean people," she said.

"We have a Polish woman who comes here and she spends about £12 every day."

Shamaine said she had approached both the Enfield Town and Edmonton Green shopping centre managers and the Edmonton one was more keen.

"That was my first choice because I live two minutes away and we do all the preparation from my kitchen and bring it here to cook on the barbecue," she added.

A Taste of Passion is open from noon to 7pm on Mondays to Saturdays.

100% ELECTRIC. 100 IMPROVEMENTS

The world's best selling all-electric car has been made even more impressive...and it's available to order now from Glyn Hopkin Nissan.

Engineers and designers have made over 100 improvements to the groundbreaking first generation Nissan LEAF to create a model that's even more appealing, practical and affordable than ever before.

The British-built second generation LEAF can travel further than its predecessor – 124 miles compared to 109 miles – and is quicker to charge too. It can be charged using a regular domestic socket for as little as £2 and in as little as four hours when using a specialist charging point.

What's more, the new LEAF, which will arrive in UK showrooms in June, now comes in three distinct trim levels for great choice, while a new battery leasing option makes financing more flexible and an enhanced battery warranty gives added peace of mind.

All of this means a life without expensive trips to the filling station, costly car tax or hefty London Congestion Charge payments could be a reality for many more motorists.

Stuart Hodson, Brand Director at Glyn Hopkin Nissan said: "If you drive less than 100 miles a day, which most motorists do, then the LEAF is an incredibly practical and super-economical car to own.

"And there's no compromise in comfort or performance. The LEAF's a brilliant car to drive and has more creature comforts and little luxuries than you may expect.

"I'd urge anyone in the market for a new car to come to their nearest Glyn Hopkin dealership to take one for a test drive and do the sums before committing themselves to another conventionally-powered car."

As with its predecessor, the second generation LEAF benefits from the Government's £5,000 plug-in grant – a one-off payment that automatically brings down the purchase price.

The well-equipped entry level Visia LEAF is available from just £20,990 RRP while even the most expensive model – the range-topping Tekna LEAF, which features a state-of-the-art BOSE sound system, 17-inch alloys and LED headlamps – is available from just £25,490 RRP.

But cost of ownership could be reduced further with the introduction of the new battery leasing scheme which enables motorists to bring down the initial purchase price of the car and then lease its battery over a fixed term with convenient monthly payments. The separate battery lease payment ranges from just £70 per month depending on the length of the contract and mileage covered.

Whichever route buyers choose to LEAF ownership, peace of mind is assured with Nissan's enhanced battery warranty. The warranty on the previous-generation LEAF's battery covered it against defective materials or workmanship for five years. The extended warranty also protects against capacity loss, with a commitment to repair or replace a battery which falls short of what might reasonably be expected.

For more information about the second generation Nissan LEAF and for details of your nearest Glyn Hopkin Nissan dealership, contact their Group Head Office on 01708 737999 or visit www.GlynHopkin.com

HOLTBY IS ENJOYING LIFE AT TOTTENHAM

By Dominique Stafford

sport.enfield@nlhnews.co.uk

LEWIS HOLTBY insists that he is happy with the way that he has settled into life at Tottenham Hotspur even though he struggled to force his way into their starting line-up.

The German international midfielder joined Spurs from Bundesliga outfit Schalke in January, but he only started four times in the Premier League during the remainder of the campaign.

Despite this, the 22-year-old has no regrets about the move and he revealed that he has really enjoyed his time at the club so far.

"Everything I hoped for has come true," he said. "I had a really enjoyable second half of the season, although it was more of a meet and greet because everything happened so quickly – on my second day at the club I made my debut at Norwich.

"The time flew by. It really has been an unbelievable spell. The atmosphere at White Hart Lane is fantastic, and it's been a great experience for me.

"I really enjoyed playing with the lads. There is so much quality here and it's a fight for places because the whole squad is so competitive. It's so enjoyable playing football with these guys. We had a great season and we'll improve.

"It's important for me now to have a summer break as we then meet for pre-season and go to Hong Kong. That will be very important. You adapt more and get to know everyone more, and that was the only thing missing when I joined in January."

Meanwhile, Kyle Walker insists that he still has plenty of room for improvement despite enjoying another impressive campaign.

The right-back made more appearances for Spurs than anyone else last season, but he admits that he is his own harshest critic and that he berates himself if he believes he has had a poor game.

He said: "I set myself high standards last season and I'm pleased I did, but once you set those standards, if you fall below them then people start to get on your back a little.

Happy at Spurs: Lewis Holtby is pleased with how he has settled into life at White Hart Lane

"I'm the first person to have a word with myself and say that I could do better. I've played 100 games in two seasons – that's a lot of games – and it took a while to get into the team.

"I was patient, got my chance two years ago and I have to keep doing the things that got me a chance in the first place. I want to win things at Tottenham.

"If I've had a bad game, I'm straight home and it gets to me. I shouldn't let that happen, but I'm passionate. I want to play to the best of my ability, and anything below that means I'm not happy."

Hornsey secure their first league victory

HORNSEY recorded their first win of the season in the top flight of the Middlesex County Cricket League on Saturday as they crushed basement side Eastcote by 154 runs to climb out of the relegation zone.

Basil Akram led the way with 60 as Hornsey amassed 230-6 batting first, sharing in a stand of 98 for the fourth wicket with Michael Philipson (44).

And this total proved far too good for struggling Eastcote as the visitors were dismissed for just 76, with Philipson (3-11), Martin Tucker (3-27) and Akram (2-28) doing most of the damage with the ball.

Meanwhile, there was disappointment for North Middlesex as they suffered a 37-run defeat at home to Harrow which saw them slip from first to fourth in the Division Two table.

Tushaar Karia made a fine unbeaten 57 to hold Harrow's innings of 170-9 together in the face of some superb bowling from Jaron Semper (5-38).

Karia then continued his outstanding individual display by effectively bowling the visitors to victory by taking 6-61 as North Middlesex were dismissed for 133. Sam Webber top scored with 42.

And Highgate took the bragging rights in their Division Three derby match at home to North London as they romped to a nine-wicket win.

The visitors struggled to 103 all out batting first despite 41 from Jack Godfrey-Wood as Carman Mapatuna (4-45) and Craig Gourlay (4-12) shone with the ball, before Syed Muazam Ali (47 not out) and Edward Binns (39 not out) shared an unbroken second-wicket stand of 65 to guide Highgate to 105-1.

Hornsey visit Ealing on Saturday, while North Middlesex go to Shepherds Bush, Highgate face a trip to Edmonton and North London host Kenton.

Skolars unable to take their chances

THE London Skolars were left to rue several missed opportunities as they slumped to a 30-22 defeat at Oldham on Sunday in rugby league's Kingstone Press Championship One.

The match started badly for the Skolars as Richard Lepori touched down for Oldham inside two minutes, but they then squandered two good try-scoring chances as James Anthony was bundled into touch just short of the line before a forward pass from Mike Worrincy saw play called back with Anthony breaking clear.

Phil Joy increased the hosts' lead with a breakaway try, but the Skolars hit back as Alex Hurst collected Dylan Skee's kick and slipped the ball on to Andy McLean to score before Anthony finished off breaks by Rob Thomas and Martyn Smith.

A Jon Ford try just before half-time gave Oldham an 18-10 advantage at the break, but the visitors scored two quick tries early in the second period to take the lead for the first time.

Louis Robinson was the first man to touch down after a Worrincy break while, two minutes later, McLean set up Anthony for his second try of the match – with Skee kicking his third conversion.

However, Oldham went back in front when John Cookson jumped high in goal for a kick and patted the ball back for Mo Agoro to score an easy try – and the hosts' went on to make sure of the win with two minutes remaining when Adam Files crossed the line. Lewis Palfrey added his fifth conversion of the afternoon to round off the scoring.

The London Skolars go to Gateshead Thunder on Sunday.
